PRATT PROVES A BOOMERANG AS HIS HOME RUN CLOUT BEATS YANKS, 2-1

Some Folks Think Derrill Walloped Ball in Anger

Waite Hoyt and Manager Miller Huggins Go Into What Appears to Be a Friendly Clinch In Yankee Dugout.

Derrill Pratt, who was brutally traded by the Yankees to the Boston Red Sox, gathered a chunk of very sweet revenge yesterday at the Polo Grounds. He spattered a home run against the cornièe of the upper tier of the right field grand stand and won the game for the Red Sox in the eighth by a 2 to 1 score. The moral of the episode seems to be, "Never kick a man downstairs unless it is a long flight.

In the vicinity of the Yankee dugout, where the shrieks of the temperamental inmates resounded on the previous day, nothing was heard yesterday but the soft cooing of the dove of peace. Waite Hoyt, the boy wonder, and Miller Hugsins, the inscrutable strategist of the Yanks, who were screaming a homicidal duet Saturday, viewed the game with their arms around each other's necks.

Col. Ruppert, president of the Yanks, dismissed the incident with the sagacious observation. "It just shows that the boys are interested in their work." Which is true. Smith and Leslie strained and struck—and struck at the air. Dazzy was there—and maybe he didn't drink in those cheers! In all he fanned eight Futiles.

Six Safeties for Phillies.

Vance gave only six hits—and only in the first inning did the Phillies manage to hit safely twice. With two gone Walker and Williams sent singles into the Wheat sector. But Parkinson filed to Zachariah, and the boys from Brownsville out in the bleachers gave Dazzy one substantial cheer. Smith—Jimmy the Tourist—playing short because Fletcher's ankle still was weak—got a fit to open the second and went on when Post let Vance's throw drill through him. But the next three were helpless.

Smith got another hit in the fourth— and went out stealing. A single by Parkinson in the seventh and that Walker blow in the ninth—these comoleted the attack of the boys from Bi ond strike and made inspection of the bail. As he had done almost invariably, Robertson used a fast bail with Clark, and, cutting the third one over, sent him back to the bench. Manion, the next hiter, lunged at the bail, but raised it for an easy out.

For the first time Robertson showed signs of nervousness when Bassier, hiting for Pillette, menaced him with his club. Johnny took a punch at the bail and sent it looping to Mostil for the final out.

With his knack of making the ball hop with Vance pitching that way it hardly was necessary for the Dodgers to come through with any deeds of derring do in the field. The star move was Wheat's catch off Walker in the sixth—and it was only a foul. Sam Post, trying to look like Jake Daubert on first, made some success with his left handed ways. He needs more training with his feet around that sack.

A slightly tainted hit started Ring had faced only ten Dodgers in three innings, one having got on through a pass. He had a lot of stuff and knew what it do with it. But that first huget him. Johnston opened the fourch with a slew one to deep short. Smith made a great throw, but Jimmy beat it by a cat's whisker—and Ring was undone.

It's foolish to go through the world with a frown, Or to spend all your time in repining; Though life double crosses you, fate throws you down You cannot mend the matter by whining: There are others with troubles as great as your own.

Or greater-there isn't a doubt of it. It doesn't help any to grouch or to groan: Snap out of it. buddie! Snap out of it!

It may be you feel you are weary and lame, And are sore on the umpire and weather; But climb off the bench and jump into the game, Or get out of the park altogether. If they wallop your fast one right out of the lot Just try a slow curve, with a spin to it. Don't quit till you've given them all you have got: Snap into it, buddie! Snap into it!

As for protecting the populace in an affair of this kind, any man who paid much money to see Jack and Georges argue with the mitts would spend it anyhow trying to guess which shell the little pea was under or buying building lots situated somewhere out in Lake Michigan.
